Problem :

Heart rate signal missing

The smartwatch continuously monitors your heart rate during daily activities and workouts. Sometimes the smartwatch reading may be inaccurate. If this happens, the missing heart rate will appear as dotted lines.

If you cannot obtain a heart rate signal, first ensure that you are wearing the smartwatch correctly. Avoid placing it too high or too low on your wrist, and do not wear it too tight or too loose. After adjusting it, tap the heart rate icon to collect data. If the heart rate data still does not appear, check the heart rate function in the app and make sure it is activated.

Other Problem :

If your phone cannot connect to the smartwatch, open the Bluetooth settings on your phone and check whether the smartwatch signal is available. If it appears but still has issues, check whether the smartwatch is connected to another device. If so, disconnect it.

iOS users should go to Settings – Bluetooth – Forget Device and reconnect.

Caution :

1. Heart rate, blood oxygen, and other data from the smartwatch cannot be used as a diagnostic reference.
2. Self-diagnosis and self-treatment are dangerous. Only professionals can diagnose heart conditions and other illnesses. Consult a doctor for proper examination.
3. Heart rate and other data measured by the smartwatch may not be completely accurate due to external interference, improper usage, or the user's physical condition.
4. Do NOT take medication or undergo treatment based solely on smartwatch data. Always follow a doctor's recommendation. We are not responsible for any inaccuracy or consequences arising from the provided data.
